1992 Top Aggies Honored at Reunion

Top Aggies for the Northwest School of Agriculture (NWSA) were honored at the 1992 reunion held this summer on the University of Minnesota, Crookston (UMC) campus. Top Aggies are selected each year by five criteria:
(1) NWSA: Activities, highlights and impact on individual
(2) Education: Personal growth, participation and service
(3) Work: History, service and contributions
(4) Service: Community, church, non-profit organizations
(5) Other: Service or commitments

All nominees are evaluated by the NWSA board of directors. The board makes the final selection selecting the Top Aggies from the honored classes.

Out of 6,000 NWSA graduates, this group joins the elite group of 43 other Top Aggies.

Selected as 1992 Top Aggies are: Lucille Hedlund Kildal '37 from Bagley, Leonard Yutrzenka '42 from Argyle, and Wallace Miller '24 from Daytona Beach, Florida.

Lucille Hedlund Kildal
Lucille Hedlund Kildal of Bagley was named Clearwater's First Lady of the Year in 1991, and in 1989, she received the Award of Merit from the Minnesota State Horticultural Society. After attending Bemidji State, she taught rural schools in Shevlin and Bagley. For 21 years she worked part-time at the Shevlin Post Office and was acting postmaster for two years. Lucille and her husband Edwin have one child.

Wallace Miller
Wallace Miller of Daytona Beach, Florida, devoted his entire working life of over 40 years to service -- in the Indian Service with the Chippewa Indians at Red Lake; with the resettlement administration, relocating farmers from South Dakota who had lost everything; as County Agent in Scott County; and developing and managing MVBA. Wallace graduated from the University of Minnesota with a degree in animal industry. He and his wife Hanna have four children, 16 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

Leonard Yutrzenka
Leonard Yutrzenka of Argyle started farming at a young age due to the poor health of his father. He has farmed ever since. He believes in conservation tillage and considers conserving soil and water as important as any other resource. Leonard is active in numerous farm-related activities, highlighted by his work with the Red River Valley Winter Shows and Soils and Water Conservation District.
From President Proulx

Once again the NWSA reunion was a tremendous success due to the efforts of the alumni staff and volunteers. We all had a great time reminiscing and talking with friends from the NWSA days. Both the luncheon and dinner were outstanding.

We received an announcement a number of weeks ago that really made our day here at the White House. As you probably have heard, UMC was slated to go for a 4-year degree college. Because of present economic climate it was a decision that was on the fence line for some time but thanks to our Regents and letters to them by many of you, we were granted this privilege. We are by no means out of the woods yet so what ever input many of you can supply to help UMC staff formulate curriculum and needs is appreciated.

I extend my sincere appreciation to all Regents and other alumnus and people who have granted us this opportunity to proceed with 4-year graduate courses.

Thank you to all of you who attended and made the '92 reunion a success.

As many of you scatter to warmer climates, remember the NWSA. We'll miss you, but if you have time before you leave, stop by the White House for a cup of coffee.

---Paul Proulx

Larson's Notes

The University of Minnesota Regents passed a resolution to change UMC's mission to allow for the offering of selected four-year degree programs. Considerable work must still be done relative to the development of the specific programs before they can be presented to the Regents for approval later this year, but the faculty and staff are hard at work on this major project. If everything goes as planned, four-year programs may be available at UMC by the fall of 1993.

We will keep you informed of our progress in future newsletters.

One thing we do know for sure is that UMC will continue to need your moral, political and financial support to help us make this goal a reality. We know we can count on our NWSA Alumni when the need arises. Please don't hesitate to contact us if you would like additional information during the coming year.

---Allan Larson

Chancellor's Comments

In July the Board of Regents voted unanimously to extend UMC's mission to include select baccalaureate degrees. Thus, we're really focused on planning meetings. We are surveying employers, students in high schools, present students and other populations to develop programs that meet the future. It is a time consuming but exciting process. We hope to have the first baccalaureate programs to the Board of Regents for information in November. After approval by the Regents, then the next step is the Minnesota Higher Education Coordinating Board. So it will be March or April before UMC officially has approved baccalaureate programs in various majors.

If you were in the area, I hope you have stopped and driven through the campus. It's never been more beautiful and I might add, we feel the instructional programs have never been better. Employers of students on internship programs this summer provided glowing reports about UMC students.

University Regents Vote to Approve Mission Change for UMC

University of Minnesota Board of Regents voted today to approve a mission change for the University of Minnesota, Crookston (UMC), paving the way for expanding the campus to a four-year institution.

Former provost and member of the Board of Regents Stanley Sahlinstrom made the motion for the revised mission for UMC to the Committee of the Whole.

UMC's Chief Executive Officer Donald Sargeant stated, "Today's action by the University of Minnesota Board of Regents is the first step toward the goal of providing select baccalaureate degrees on the University of Minnesota campus in Crookston. It has involved a tremendous amount of consultation both from within the University of Minnesota and with other higher education institutions, students, employers and legislators."

The Regents vote approves implementation of a revised mission to provide access to select baccalaureate programs in partnership with the University of Minnesota campuses and in partnership with other institutions.

Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe said, "I'm excited about expanded opportunities for the northwest quadrant of Minnesota through upper division courses at the Crookston campus. I look forward to a cooperative effort with other higher educational institutions in the region to meet the continuing needs and demands for the state in higher education."

Rod Nelson, president of First American National Bank in Crookston said, "This is one of the most important decisions affecting Crookston and northwestern Minnesota that we've had in many years, from an economic standpoint, from a resource standpoint to the area, and for the educational opportunities it provides for the residents of Crookston and northwestern Minnesota. All the past successes, the significant present investment and future potential are a part of this decision."

Select baccalaureate programs would be offered in agriculture, business, natural resources, early childhood education, small business management, hotel/restaurant management and appropriate interdisciplinary studies.

"I'm delighted that the future of the University of Minnesota, Crookston is insured. As the founder of UMC I know of its solid academic programs and the dedication of the faculty to serving students effectively in selected four-year programs. UMC has always stood for quality education. The campus has prepared itself well with telecommunication contacts throughout northwestern Minnesota with both two- and four-year institutions. Drawing on the expertise from other institutions in the area as well as from the Twin Cities campus, it will provide needed courses and programs to meet the needs of northwestern Minnesota," Sahlinstrom said.

Primary funding for the program growth would come from tuition from increased enrollment. Additional state funds will not be needed.

Ken Schuster, manager of Rivard's Quality Seeds Inc. in Argyle, said, "As a Northwest School of Agriculture graduate, I've seen what the campus has done for myself and my business. To allow students to continue in a four-year program will give them an opportunity to learn and work in the same area."

UMC can offer its students special opportunities through a major telecommunications project that links the campus with programs from other campuses, including the Twin Cities campus.

Tom Jorgens, president of Meta Dynamics in Crookston, said, "By strengthening the role of the University in helping to make sure that the next 100 years can be as prosperous as the last century. Particularly important is the recognition of distance learning as it creates opportunities for both the young and the not-so-young students to gain convenient access to high quality educational opportunities."

The timetable for implementing baccalaureate programs at the Crookston campus is as follows:
- Regents vote on baccalaureate programs in fall 1992
- Higher Education Coordinating Board reviews programs in late fall 1992
- Baccalaureate programs begin in Fall 1993

Chancellor Sargeant said, "The UMC campus faced a fork in the road. One path led to a dead end. The other path, the one chosen, extends the existing two-year programs into four-year degree programs. The plan includes only a minimal increase in the freshman class size, few new programs, no additional state funds, and it includes courses from other colleges as part of the curriculum. The plan is not creating an additional higher education institution but rather making better use of an existing institution."

"Adoption of this resolution is an indication of President Hasselmo's and the Board's commitment to strengthen the University of Minnesota's access and services in Greater Minnesota. This decision goes beyond providing undergraduate education to students on the Crookston campus. It will, through increased investments in telecommunications make more courses, workshops, and seminars available throughout the state. And it greatly enhances research with a focus on rural development. So today's action is one that is educationally and economically sound for the University of Minnesota and for Minnesotans."

Jim Koehler, executive vice president of the Crookston Chamber of Commerce, said, "Congratulations to Chancellor Donald Sargeant and the hard working staff who created this vision for the University and the community. What an exciting time for the future of our community that the University of Minnesota, Crookston will be able to offer four-year programs."

Four-year degree: FACT SHEET

The Proposal:
- Begin offering four-year baccalaureate programs at UMC.
- The baccalaureate programs would be in agriculture, business, natural resources, restaurant management, and appropriate interdisciplinary studies.
- Tuition from increased enrollment would be the primary funding source.
- The number of full-time equivalent students is expected to increase from estimated at $12,000 per year by 1997.

Reasons for expanding UMC's role:
- The University wants to maintain an educational presence in northwestern Minnesota.
- Four-year degree programs fit the overall mission of the University of Minnesota.
- UMC can offer its students special opportunities through a major twin cities campuses, including the Twin Cities campus.
- UMC's agriculture, natural resources, hospitality, and small business programs are a good fit.
- Instructional costs per student would decrease to $7,250 annually by 1997.
- With the University's Northwest Experiment Station and the state's Agricultural Extension Service in Crookston fulfilling the service mission.

Background:
- UMC was established in 1965 and offers two-year associate degrees in business management, and human ecology. UMC employs 214 faculty and staff.

Timetable:
- Regents vote on baccalaureate programs in fall 1992.
- Higher Education Coordinating Board review is sought for fall 1992.
- Baccalaureate programs begin in fall 1993.

UMC offers 30 degree programs in agriculture, natural resources, business, hotel/restaurant management, and educates about 1,300 students each year.
Introducing Kathy Braukmann

Kathy Braukmann is the new senior secretary for the White House Alumni Center. A 1992 graduate of UMC's business division, she replaced Julie Hamre who resigned in May to spend more time with her young family. While enrolled in classes at UMC, Kathy was active in Collegiate Secretaries International, serving as editor of their newsletter. She also earned the coveted Member of the Year Award. Stop by the White House and welcome Kathy as she works with the alumni association.

DID YOU KNOW?

- Groundbreaking ceremonies were held for the Agricultural Operations Management Center. Taking part in the festivities were: University of Minnesota Regent and founding provost Dr. Stanley Sahlstrom; Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe; State Representative Bernie Lieder; Crookston Mayor Doug Oman; and UMC Chancellor Dr. Donald Sargeant. Dr. James L. McBee, chairperson of the agriculture division, was master of ceremonies for the event.

- When complete, the Agricultural Operations Management Center will serve as a regional education and extension center with enhanced telecommunication. The $4.6 million project will have a major impact on the teaching, research and service mission of the University's Crookston Campus.

- Ken Myers, associate professor of hotel, restaurant and institutional management in the business division, received UMC's Distinguished Teaching Award.

- Jerome Rude, gardener and 1983 UMC graduate, received the Distinguished Service Award from UMC.

Korean Conflict Plaque Dedicated

--by Twylia Altepeter, Crookston Daily Times

After almost three decades, memories of the Korean Conflict still stand out in sharp-edged relief. Four veterans of that war spoke at dedication ceremonies for a Korean Conflict plaque. The ceremonies were held Saturday morning, June 27, at the memorial monument at the main entrance to the University of Minnesota, Crookston campus.

Martin Johnson, of Crookston, served with the U.S. Army Infantry in Korea. "We were told to hold our ground on the high ground," he said. He told of the death of comrades and attempts to identify the casualties.

Edwin Meyers, of Fresno, Calif., is originally from Warroad. He served with the U.S. Marine Corps in the Korean conflict, which he called "Harry Truman's police action." A World War II veteran, Meyers was called back to active duty in Korea.

He spoke of the bitter cold of a dangerous nine-day march that took the Marines some 27 hard-fought miles. He recalled wearing an oversized greatcoat that he was mighty thankful for. "It took three bullets but, because it was so big, none of them touched me," Meyers said.

(Meyers, a member of the Northwest School of Agriculture Class of 1932, was here for his 60th class reunion.)

Ludger Longtin, of Crookston, served with the U.S. Army near the Yellow River. "When we were told to run I didn't run fast enough," he said. Longtin spent 33 months in a prisoner of war camp.

He called the Korean Conflict "the forgotten war" because it took this long for a monument to remember those who died, those who served and those who are missing."

Howard Johnson, of Shoreview, served with the U.S. Air Force in Korea. He shared some recollections of Korea, but spoke instead of groundbreaking ceremonies for the national Korean War Memorial in Washington, D.C. He said the recognition was long overdue but said it was pleasing that the nation was finally giving recognition to veterans of a bitter and bloody struggle.

The talk of war and bitter cold made a stark counterpoint for the ceremonies held on a sunny June morning midst flower gardens on the quiet campus.

UMC Chancellor Donald Sargeant welcomed the crowd of about 75 people to the ceremonies.

Crookston Mayor Doug Oman presided at the unveiling of the plaque and read the inscription: "A solemn tribute to the men and women of the Northwest School of Agriculture who served with distinction in the Armed Forces of the United States during the Korean Conflict."

The plaque was sponsored by NWSA Alumni Association, according to Allan Larson, director of external relations for UMC. About two years ago the alumni association received a letter from a Korean Conflict veteran, who pointed out that there were memorial plaques for other wars, but not for Korea. The alumni association decided to commission a plaque and dedicate it during this year's NWSA annual alumni reunion.

Larson spoke briefly and asked for a moment of silent prayer at the dedication ceremonies.

Don Mulvany, commander of Crookston Chapter 14 of the Disabled American Veterans, and Allen Nelson, representing the VFW and the Crookston Veterans Council, placed a wreath at the base of the monument.

Second Annual Golf Classic A Success

It was a beautiful day and 62 golfers enjoyed playing in the UMC/Community Golf Classic Friday, July 17. A Texas scramble format was used this year, and golfers were allowed to make up their own teams using the following criteria:

1. The four-person team handicap had to equal 36 or more for 9 holes.
2. A team could not include more than 2 golfers with handicaps of 5 or less.

Fifteen teams competed in the event:
First place was taken by the team of Scott Oliver, Jim Sims, Craig Anderson and Grant Ledyard with a round of 8 under par. Three teams tied for second place at 7 under par. A tie-breaker system was used to determine second, third and fourth places. These team members were as follows:

- Second: Marv Bachmeier, Ricky Johnson, Bob Nelson, Harold Opgrand
- Third: Jerry Wardner, Dave Colborn, Dale Charais, Jim Wilson
- Fourth: John Peters, Jay Nimens, Karl Bornhoft, Brian Schumacher, and Paul Hoff.

The tournament also included several special awards:
- Hole 2 - Drive Closest to the Line - Bruce Brorson
- Hole 4 - Closest to the Pin - Ricky Johnson
- Hole 8 - Longest Drive - Dale Helm
- Hole 7 - Closest to Pin, 2 shots - Keith Sannes

Keith Sannes won the drawing for "The New U" golf shirt.

In addition to everyone having a good time, $600 was raised and will be awarded as a scholarship to a deserving UMC student.

The tournament committee of Steve Biermeier, Marv Bachmeier, Harold Opgrand and Al Larson said they hope to build the event to about 90 golfers next summer. Hope you can join us for the Third Annual Golf Classic.
